PASTOR'S NOTE

As humans, we love the sense of having control. Control isn't a good or a bad thing. It's how we handle that control that determines its value. When we live in world that is chaotic, with different life-altering situations, we hold on to things like routine, people, and even our faith. Because in some way, we've learned the dynamics of how they function. We love routine and systems so much, that they can turn into tradition since all is expected to remain the same. When others bring change or desire innovation, it's normal to fight it, but what if God is calling us to let go and let it be?

-Pastor Sandra
